"The Big Sleep" is Howard Hawks' production of Raymond Chandler's hard-hitting novel starring one of Hollywood's most sensational couples, Bogart and Bacall. The film story begins with blackmail and ends in murder with Bogart, in the role of a private detective, romantically involved with the sultry daughter of a millionaire eccentric.

'The Big Sleep' Here Today

Opening Day—

Film's most sensational couple, Humphrey Bogart and Lauren Bacall, return to the screen in co-starring roles in Howard Hawks' production "The Big Sleep," which opens today at the Theatre.

Blackmail which has its payoff in murder is the force behind the tense drama which paired Bogart and Bacall in this hit of action hits. Bogart is seen in one of his most famous portrayals as Philip Marlowe, the private detective created by mystery writer Raymond Chandler. Bacall plays the part of the sultry daughter of a millionaire who hires the services of Humphrey Bogart.

As directed by Howard Hawks "The Big Sleep" adds up to tense and dramatic entertainment. William Faulkner, winner of the Nobel prize for literature, wrote the screen adaptation with Leigh Brackett and Jules Furthman.

STORY

Private detective Philip Marlowe (HUMPHREY BOGART), summoned to the home of bed-ridden General Sternwood, meets the general's two daughters, Vivian (LAUREN BACALL) and Carmen (MARTHA VICKERS). From his client, Marlowe learns that Carmen is being blackmailed. Vivian, in an effort to help her troubled sister, joins forces with Marlowe. Their investigation, bringing with it murder, leads them to Eddie Mars (JOHN RIDGELY), a big-time racketeer who would like Marlowe out of the way. Marlowe falls into the clutches of Eddie's gunmen at their hideout where he also finds Vivian who helps him escape. Rushing with her to confront Mars, Marlowe traps the underworld leader into confessing the murder of Carmen's fiancée, believed missing, and convincing Vivian that her wild sister was his accomplice. Outside, Mars' henchmen await to wipe out Marlowe. Instead, the detective forces Mars to go first and the latter meets death at his own direction. The case closes, Vivian and Marlowe admit their love.
